

Balancing Civility & Free Expression

February 21, 2013 5:30 — 7:00 pm

Toyota Auditorium

Howard H. Baker Jr. Center for Public Policy, University of Tennessee

Gov. Bill Haslam (2011-present)

Gov. Phil Bredesen (2003-11)

Gov. Don Sundquist (1995-2003)

Moderator - Bill Haltom

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT
FOR THE HUMANITIES

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Division for Public Education

FIRST AMENDMENT
CENTER

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE
KNOXVILLE

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE
KNOXVILLE
COLLEGE OF LAW

This program is part of Civility and Free Expression in a Constitutional Democracy—A National Dialogue, funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and is conducted in partnership with the American Bar Association Division for Public Education. Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed do not necessarily represent those of the National Endowment for the Humanities, the American Bar Association, or any of its program partners.*

Balancing Civility & Free Expression for effective governance*

Join our distinguished panel of former and present Tennessee governors for this important discussion on civility and free expression for effective governance.

- What is civility & why does it matter?
- What is the problem and what is the solution?
- When do civility and free expression conflict and how do we deal with that?

We will explore civility on the campaign trail and in debates, civility within the legislature, and civility and citizen interaction with government. And who better to discuss this issue than our present and two former Tennessee governors, Gov. Bill Haslam, Gov. Phil Bredesen and Gov. Don Sundquist. The panel will be moderated by Memphis attorney and UT alum, Bill Haltom.

Free & open to the public!